MEMBERSHIP APPLICATION FORM

Thank you for joining us!

Genetic Heritage Ireland (The Irish Genetic Resources Conservation Trust) was established in 1993 to promote activities by groups and individuals that further the gathering of information about and the conservation and sustainable utilisation of plant and animal genetic resources in all of Ireland. Special emphasis is on rare species, breeds and cultivars in danger of extinction or of cultural and historical importance.

In addition the trust aims to bring together groups and individuals with an interest in conservation and sustainable development and to promote the Irish contribution to conservation at an international level, with particular reference to the European Community Programme for the Conservation of Genetic Resources. GHI is represented on the National Advisory Committee on Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture, and has made submissions relating to the Irish National Biodiversity Plan (1997) and the Irish Country Report on Plant Genetic Resources (1994).

By joining us, you are helping us continue important environmental work for future generations. Simply fill out this form and post it along with your cheque or postal order to the above address.

Thank you!

Rico Santiago
